- Jeff Thom, GTAA's Operational Support Manager

Key Challenge: Finding Balance Between Security and Efficiency

- The Toronto Pearson International Airport ecosystem is extremely complex with over 47 million passengers, 450 thousand aircraft travelling through the airport every year
  - Highly dependent on contractors performing various services throughout its 4,000+ acre facility
  - Heavy investment in security, access control and biometric systems in order to safeguard sensitive areas
- Modernizing security and managing an extremely large group of contractors efficiently
  - Badges and access cards issued to most contractors in order to expedite entry into the facility, but there were many contractors that did not hold access credentials with the airport
  - Contractors undergo time-consuming, manual checks prior to being granted access to restricted areas
  - Analysis of activities were mainly paper based, limiting capabilities of security staff
